Laser-sharp gamblers keep Winnings

Three gamblers who used a laser device __64__ more than a million pounds at a London hotel casino will not face prosecution because they __65__ nothing illegal, police said Sunday.

The three, who used gadgetry on March 16 to calculate where a roulette ball would land, will be $__{66}$ to keep their winnings of £1.3 million, or $2.5 million, officers said. "All three persons that were $__{67}$ have been informed that no further action will be $__{68}$ ", a Scotland Yard spokesman said. "All the money detained by the police has been returned."

The 69, a Hungarian woman and two Serb men, were alleged to 70 a laser scanner inside a cell-phone into the Ritz Club casino. The phone was 71 to a computer, the Sunday

Times newspaper reported. The scanner measured the speed of the $__72_$ as it was released by the croupier, identified where it $__73_$ and measured the declining orbit of the wheel, The Times said.

The information was __74__ to the computer, which calculated on which section of numbers the ball would land. This information was then flashed onto the cell- phone ___75__ just before the wheel made its third spin, by which time all ___76__ must be placed.

Having reduced their odds of winning from 37 to 1 to six to one, the three placed bets on all six numbers in the section where the ball was ____77___ to stop.

On the first night they won £100,000, returning the next night to win £1.2 million.

After the casino's security experts later examined closed-circuit television footage, officers from Scotland Yard's ____78___ squad arrested the trio at a ____79___ hotel on suspicion of obtaining their winnings by ____80___. It was later determined that they had done nothing illegal because the scanner did not interfere with the roulette wheel.
